Julie King is a mother of four and a lifelong advocate for education that meets the needs of every child. A graduate of BYU in Family Sciences and UVU with a master's in Constitutional Government, Julie has worked as a social worker supporting children affected by abuse, neglect, and domestic violence. She and her husband have also served as foster parents, giving her a special passion for helping youth aging out of care.

Julie's advocacy includes championing Dual Language Immersion, Advanced Learning Lab, and strong supports for students with disabilities. She has led at every level of parent and community involvement, serving as PTA president, SCC member, and on the Alpine District Community Council. Appointed by the State Board of Education, she contributed to the Student Data Privacy Advisory Group.

On the Alpine School Board, Julie has advanced transparency and accountability, collaborated with state leaders, and played a key role in major legislation and capital projects, including new schools across the district. She also serves as Chair of the Mountainland Technical College Board of Trustees.

Julie brings experience, collaboration, and dedication to building strong schools and strong communities.
