J.D. Cronin, Jr. is running for Hideout Town Council, bringing over 20 years of experience in enterprise risk management and financial leadership. His career includes leadership roles in banking, finance, and investment management, notably at the Federal Reserve Bank of Chicago, where he provided regulatory strategy guidance and managed complex financial operations.

A key focus of his career has been developing strategic frameworks that balance growth with prudent risk management, skills he believes are essential for effective municipal governance.

J.D. holds an MBA from the University of Chicago Booth School of Business and a BA in Economics from the University of Michigan. He's already committed to Hideout's future, having served on the Town's Economic Development Committee since 2021.

His analytical skills, strategic thinking, and proven ability to build high-performing teams position him to help guide Hideout's continued growth while maintaining its unique character and fiscal responsibility.

Outside of his professional life, J.D. is married with three daughters. He's a lifelong University of Michigan sports fan and a passionate Rolling Stones enthusiast.
