Brian Cooper brings unique engineering expertise to complement the skills of the current Town Council. His priorities include strengthening economic development, improving public safety, and ensuring resilient infrastructure—vital goals as Hideout grows responsibly.

Brian is committed to strategic planning that avoids urban sprawl, manages traffic congestion, and enhances public safety through stronger building code enforcement. He will promote transparent communications within our community and solicit public input, especially for future commercial developments. He will encourage developers and HOAs to implement firewise measures to mitigate wildfire risks.

A retired engineer with more than 50 years of experience, Brian's career spanned autonomous ocean systems, advanced avionics, and complex IT solutions for the federal government. Since moving to Hideout in 2019, he has served the community by leading the Infrastructure Committee in developing master plans for water, sewer, drainage, power, gas, and internet services. As chair of the Shoreline One HOA Architecture Review Committee, Brian ensures proposed modifications meet neighborhood standards. And, when winter hits, he even pitches in as a part-time snowplow driver to support town crews.

Brian's blend of technical expertise, hands-on service, and commitment to thoughtful growth make him a strong advocate for Hideout's future. Learn more at www.briancooperforhideouttowncouncil.com
